

Forged copper pendants by Antje Roitzsch

FP 11

Pendants for Men and Women

I always have been interested in creating jewelry that can be also worn by men. Here is an attempt to create pendants that speak to the raw, unrefined, pure and adventurous spirit of both men and women.

FP 12

FP 16

Forging

Forging is the oldest form of metalsmithing. In ancient times after the metal had been purified and molten it had to be forged into usable shapes like wire or sheets that then could get more refined into the creation the metalsmith would work on. But the very first step was the forging. These pendants are all made out of copper square or round stock and forged into different shapes just with a hammer on an anvil. I use an old railroad tile as my anvil. No two pendants will be the same. They might remind one of an old tool used in farming or boatbuilding

FP 13

FP 17

FP 14

FP 15

FP 18